FAMILY DOCTOR

Thyroid condition often misdiagnosed

By Allan Bruckheim We live in a close community. and when the woman next door began to change, it was noticed by all. She began to shun us and became very nasty, irritable and gruff. Her face seemed to swell, and it wasn't until her granddaughter visited and took her to a doctor that we found out she had a mental condition that needed thyroid to cure it. Have you ever neard of anything like this?

The woman was suffering from hy-A. pothyroidism, also known as myxe-

Essentially, the thyroid gland no longer functions properly, and enough thyroid hormone is not produced. Slowly, and usually very gradually, physical changes can be observed; a dull facial expression, puffiness around the eyes and drooping eyelids. The skin becomes coarse, dry, scaly and thick, and the scalp hair becomes sparse and dry.

The patients become forgetful, and in some - as in your neighbor - their personality changes and their intellect becomes diminished. When the changes are severe enough, they resemble a true psychosis. Some clinicians have named the condition myxedema madness.

The sad part is that this condition is frequently misdiagnosed, especially in older folks, but no amount of psychotherapy, tranquilizers or antidepressants can help. And without proper treatment, the condition persists, leading to complete physical and mental deterioration.

A number of laboratory tests can swiftly pinpoint the problem, and a number of thyroid medications can replace the amounts needed by the body. The good news is that with proper medications the situation can be reversed rapidly. These patients may make a complete recovery, enabling them to return home and live happy and productive lives.

BILLY GRAHAM

Dear Billy Graham: My husband and I only stay together for the sake of the children. When they are gone, I know we will get a divorce. I know you will say God can make a difference, but our love is long gone and I am not sure I even want it to return. - Mrs. A.P.

Dear Mrs. A.P.: Yes, I will say God can make a difference — and I say it because I believe it is true. Repeatedly I have seen couples who were at the point of divorce — or beyond have their love for each other renewed as they yielded their lives to Jesus Christ and let Him take control of their marriages.

You see, God gave marriages to us - and He gave it for our mutual help and happiness. That is why it takes three people to make a good marriage: the husband, the wife — and God. When we leave God out, marriage easily descends into a constant tug of war, with each desiring only their own will. No, I don't know all the problems that have led to your present attitude, but I do know Christ can help you and fill you with a new love for each other. Open your lives to Him and His love today.
